

PORTLAND STREET OF DREAMS

Portland, Oregon | Products: LD Series Solid Core Plain Slice White Maple StileLine® Double Stile Doors

Everyone's dream is a little different. In Portland, though, the homes filling one of the latest Street of Dreams projects has enough to fit anyone's perfect house scenario. BC Custom Construction took part in the Portland version of the Street of Dreams, taking on the NW Natural Street of Dreams focus outside Portland in Lake Oswego. While BC Custom tackled two different projects on the one street, one dream house—this one designed by Mike Barclay of Barclay Home Design—is enough to make us dream of our own home changes.

The 5,736-square-foot home takes on a modern-inspired design, but still with the Northwest flair you'd expect from warm, comfortable finishes, embracing the natural world. The home's soaring windows welcome in the scenic views the Pacific Northwest so often offers, including the sweeping territorial views and visions of majestic Mount Hood. The open floor plan on the four bedroom, four-and-a-half bath home bathes in the light from the full-wall windows. And while this NW Natural dream home comes in four stories—with a custom-made metal staircase to connect them all—Lynden Door was able to help tie it all together inside.

Using the StileLine® double stile doors, the dream home captured one of Lynden Door's pinnacle choices for the modern aesthetic. The European-influenced aesthetic provides an upscale look, but the versatility of the grains allow for differentiation in the design without straying from the plain-sliced white maple wood chosen to match the Northwest-friendly materials and décor.

When it comes time to make a dream come true in Portland, designers and builders have ample choices when it comes to materials and finishes. But dreams require exactness, choice selections, the kind that make the NW Natural Street of Dreams a showcase of residential perfection.
