*Important Note:

African Mahogany wood has long been celebrated for the beauty of its variety. This species produces a range of bold colors including pinks, reds and browns. The color of the wood is typically lighter when the log is first cut and deepens with maturity. Grain patterns range from straight to wavy. This veneer yields a high percentage of ribbon grain; however this may not be present in all veneers. All woods are a natural material with varying colors and grain patterns, even in veneers taken from the same tree. The appearance of the finished doors will vary due to these characteristics.
